

H. W. ANDERSON TELLS OF RUSSIAN AFFAIRS

Reconstruction Problem Is to Weed Out Every Vestige of Czarism.

STUDENTS A POWER

Remarkable Changes Taking Place, Returned Graduate Says.

According to H. W. ("Easy") Anderson who has been in Y. M. C. A. work in Russia, the great problem of reconstruction of the Russian government is to get rid of every vestige of the power which was formerly vested in the Czar.

"Before the revolution," said Mr. Anderson, "the government was a thing which everybody hated and tried to avoid; it was a thing to get rid of. The great problem before the people today is the establishment of a democratic government. This is proving to be a difficult task because of the fact that the people have been so oppressed and have never been allowed a voice in the affairs of the government."

Speaking of Russian patriotism, Mr. Anderson said, "Before the revolution I never heard the national anthem of Russia sung. Whenever it was started the students would hiss it down. There wasn't such a thing as patriotism. It is very difficult for Americans to realize the great changes which have been made in everything since the revolution. The Czar's Royal Palace in Petrograd has been remodeled and made a meeting place for the Committee of Citizens and Soldiers. The Czar himself is being held a prisoner in another palace about 30 miles from Petrograd. Recently the guard around the palace has been strengthened."

Mr. Anderson has been at the head of the medical work of first aid to the wounded soldiers at the Polytechnic Institute of Petrograd. He also organized the Y. M. C. A. there. Previous to the revolution all lectures by professors in the universities and schools of Russia were censored by the policemen who had charge of the censorship department. These policemen were usually not highly educated men and consequently were very poor judges of what lectures to censor. As a result some of Russia's greatest scholars were forced to leave the country. The newspapers also were under strict censorship by the police. "In fact," said Mr. Anderson, "everything in Russia was under political control."

An amusing little incident was related by Mr. Anderson concerning one of his own experiences with the censorship bureau. One of Mr. Anderson's relatives sent him "The Uncrowned King" by Harold Bell Wright, and because of the illustrations in the book, the censor would not allow it to be delivered to Mr. Anderson. It was only after a whole day spent in argument with the policeman that the book was finally released from the censorship bureau.

Mr. Anderson said this morning that he expects to return to Russia and resume his work there.

STATE EGG WASTE IS LARGE

Conservation Would Mean Saving of $5,661,000 for Missouri.

More than one-sixth of the annual egg output of Missouri is lost through carelessness. According to figures supplied by H. L. Kempster, professor of poultry husbandry in the College of Agriculture, Missouri hens produce 1,320,000,000 eggs a year. Of this number, 17 per cent, or 226,400,000 eggs are lost through spoilage and breakage. These would weigh 28,305,000 pounds. They represent 141,525 pounds of chicken feed and the output of 2,264,400 hens. If all the eggs which are now wasted in Missouri were conserved, there would be an extra egg for every Sunday and holiday in the year.

The loss from bad eggs comes about because a single broken or spoiled egg is not considered a great loss. In fact, it is so small that it is hardly noticed on the average farm, but it is the total of these broken and bad eggs which causes an annual loss of $5,661,000 when eggs are selling at 30 cents a dozen.

MRS. MILLER TO AID HOOVER

Columbia Woman Would Have Suffragists Aid in Eliminating Waste.

Mrs. Walter McNab Miller of Columbia, first vice-president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association has offered to Herbert C. Hoover, the new food administrator, the services of thousands of suffragists who have organized to work for the elimination of waste. Mrs. Miller had a conference with Mr. Hoover in Washington at which she outlined the steps contemplated. She has been making a two months' tour of the South organizing her thrift forces.

Among the features proposed are local food surveys, garden clubs, canning clubs, buying clubs and markets. Mrs. Miller said that the basis of the whole scheme was co-operation and self-denial, community action and individual responsibility in an effort to keep a steady market.

"There is more real patriotism in refusing to contribute to boosting food prices than in all the flag-raising and spread-eagle speeches that can be made," said Mrs. Miller. "The rich and the well-to-do must make it their business to see that all the people are fed. That is the real call to national service. The most important step in food conservation is the realization that, in so far as possible, each section of the country must be self-supporting."

MELBOURNE HEARS M. J. LECTURE

Prof. C. G. Ross Talks on "The American Press" in Australia.

Charles G. Ross, professor of the theory and practice of journalism in the University of Missouri, who is doing practical newspaper work in Australia, delivered a lecture before the Melbourne University Historical Society April 18, on "The American Press."

The Melbourne Herald gives credit where credit is due, printing after Mr. Ross' name "(Missouri, U. S. A.), now attached to the sub-editorial staff of 'The Herald.'"

A discussion followed the lecture. It dealt with the American press and the war; schools of journalism and their importance; the yellow press; the Australian press, its growth, present importance and possibilities; the influence of a powerful press on progress and happiness and the value of censorship.

The program for the lecture, evidently scattered about as advertising matter, says "a large attendance is hoped for."

SPORT

The Columbia Browns invaded Mexico yesterday afternoon and lost a hair-raising baseball game to the team of that city 2 to 3. The Mexico team was baffled completely by the south-paw twirling of Bobby Hogg, a former first baseman of Tigerdom, who did not permit a hit for the first six innings. Only four hits were made off his delivery, but these hits combined with loose support and the breaks of the game were adequate to produce three runs and the game for the Mexico team.

"Robert Simpson of Missouri, the world's greatest hurdler" is the underline of a picture of Bob Simpson on the cover of the Sporting Life, a Philadelphia weekly athletic publication. In the same issue Ralph Glaze, Drake coach and former coach at the University of Southern California, says: "I believe that the world's record of 14 3-5 seconds held by Bob Simpson in the high hurdles is unbeatable now and probably will stand for years. I believed that the ultimate had been reached when Fred Kelly ran the event in 15 second flat. Then Earl Thompson of Southern California ran the event in 14 4-5. If anybody ever breaks Simpson's record it will be Thompson, who is now a student at Dartmouth."
